

Halloween House

Two charts, one in color, the other black and white. Think of each as a house with thirty rooms. There is a little overlap in meanings of the images contained in the two charts, but there is much that differs between them as well. You may choose to consult only one of them, or you may choose to use both. Any yes/no divination tool can help you resolve this issue.

These casting charts are designed to be used in a box or a tray in order to compel an answer, for an enclosed casting container will ricochet the cast object back onto the chart. You may, if you choose, actually cast the stone or button onto the chart with no such guardrails.

These charts are designed to answer three questions:

- What is my Future?
- What is my Advice?
- What is my Fear?

For this reason, you will need to cast the stone or button three times. The preferred method is to place the stone anywhere on the chart, close the box, then with the box in your hands, ask the question. For example, what is my future? You shake the box around in a circular fashion, clockwise or counterclockwise, five, seven, or nine times. Then place the box down on a flat surface, carefully open it, and see where the stone landed. If the stone landed on more than one square, you will need to read the answer for each square it landed on, for your true answer may well be a combination of them.

The second-to-the-last page of this PDF file contains answer slips which you can print up, cut-out and record your answers on. These Future and Advice predictions are mostly intended to be short-term, no more than a few months, but there are some which may be longer. Certainly, the Fears can last longer.
